

WO Yolanda Plazas de Lozada

CYBERPUNK

Description

A slight woman with a face that belongs on a pixie more than a battle-tested soldier. You keep your hair long, treat it well, and are usually up on most of the latest fashions that do not interfere with your job. This allows you to mix better with most local populations. Sure you are often noticed, but never recognized.

Background

Employed with Militech for just a bit over 10 years, you have spend the vast majority of your time in the Intelligence Division. During your time there you tried to get a field assignment, but you boss continued to turn down your requests. Getting a field assignment is the ticket to higher office within the company. So you transferred to the Direct Action division and got assigned as an intelligence asset for this team. It has been a rocky ride, but things are finally settling down to a pattern.

Team

As the team's intelligence resource you are responsible for keeping their local data storage up to date on changes within their action area. You keep the team up to date with weekly reports, but a second report strictly for the LT and Sarge. In the field you provide infiltration and intelligence gathering as needed; otherwise you are another rifle on the line.

Lt. Franks

You not only respect the LT for his ability to break down a problem into simple pieces, but you also find a certain level of physical attraction. Its nothing that deep, only an understanding that the LT is a natural leader and that you follow him for the same reason you suspect the others do.

Sgt. Guerrero

Besides a very brief affair that started during a mission debrief, you have kept your distance from the sarge. You did not take the break-up well, but you put up a wall of unconcern and just worked to forget it. You do respect how the sarge acts as the bridge between the team and the LT, he also plays devil's advocate at team meetings. He always seems one-half step in front of the questions he needs to answer.

Carlos

You checked out the portions of his folder that you could, even though this is technically wrong because he is on your team. What you saw frightens you and ensures that you will not turn your back on him - ever. You have begun working with him on re-establishing his own faith, but it has been slow.

Hans

Like the brother you left behind in Costa Rica, only creepier. He has tried to pick you up several times when he is deep in his cups. Each time has ended in failure at best and physical pain at worst. Still, like a eager puppy he seems to always come back.

Duane

Not a very bright man, more of a hack than any true skill. Still, he has been able to built at least some of the special equipment you need in the field. His eyes are always leering at you and you know that Hans as told several false stories about hooking up with you to Duane. You are sure that he thinks he will be able to hook up as well, so you make sure that you both are never alone in a situation he could misconstrue.

Dominic

Wow, somebody stepped right off the "We want you" poster and onto the team. He could not be more Hoo-Rah if he tried. What bothers you most is that his entire record with the company has been placed under seal by Internal Security two weeks before he joined the team. This is very unusual something that you are trying to get around as their must be some reason his record is blocked.

Alan

A very smart man, but he keeps are very long distance between you both. You are not sure why, but you keep trying to work over that puzzle. He does seem to do very good work and you have worked together on data gathered from assignments previously. You just do not like not knowing why he seems a bit testy around you most days.

Christine

Never a true friend, but at least until she lost both her arms she at least was a true companion. Now she simply goes through the motions, never reaching any sort of goal. She still does a very fine job, but it easily seen that she does not enjoy doing this work anymore.

Ramiro

You work very well with Ramiro, which is good because he is often responsible for getting you in and extracting you out of any situation. You have returned his favor by providing several small snippets of information that could hurt his own side-businesses. Its a solid working relationship that benefits both sides.

Dana

That mission where she nearly died has also been marked classified with a rating that only a very few can reach. Luckily you happen to have her right here so that you can uncover a few gems. What you have seen is not pretty and she should not go out on patrol.
